

Notes On Contributors

Leslie Limage

UNESCO Education Sector Programme Specialist (retired). Literacy and Basic Education policy and practice specialist. Currently: International and Comparative Education Consultant. Former Visiting Professor of Comparative Education, UCLA and Arizona State University, Secondary school and adult education and literacy tutor, United Kingdom. Graduate degrees from University of Paris and University of London Institute of Education in Comparative Education, Economics of Education and Sociology of Education.

Numerous publications, studies, reports and public-speaking in literacy, education policy reform, education in post-conflict and reconstruction, diversity and education. contact: leslie.limage@wanadoo.fr

J. Lo Bianco

J. Lo Bianco is professor of language and literacy education at the University of Melbourne. He was the author of the 1987 National Policy on Languages, which addressed adult literacy, English and languages other than English across education and training sectors. He directed the National Languages and Literacy Institute of Australia between 1990 and 2002. At the University he specialises in research and teaching in sociolinguistics as well as policy on literacy and language questions. Current projects include children's early writing, mass English teaching in China and language policy in SE Asia, especially Sri Lanka, Malaysia, China and Thailand. He is President of the Australian Academy of the Humanities.